

Employment-related changes are the most frequent reason people switch health plans

Changes in premium costs may have resulted in a higher proportion of consumers with individually purchased plans switching health plans in the last year, compared to other insurance types.